A. OVERVIEW OF THE LAW REFORM COMMISSION

The Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia was created by the Government of Nova Scotia under the Law Reform Commission Act.¹ The Commission consists of between five and seven Commissioners (there are currently six), an Executive Director and legal research and administrative staff. The Commission reports to the public and the elected representatives of Nova Scotia through the Attorney General of Nova Scotia. It is not, however, a government department, but an independent advisor to government. The Commissioners, whose appointment process is set out in the Act, currently serve part-time and come from different sectors of the community. One Commissioner is a judge appointed by the Governor in Council (provincial Cabinet) after consultation with the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia and the chief judge of the court of which the judge is a member; two are community representatives appointed by Cabinet; two are appointed by the Council of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society; and one person represents the full-time members of the Faculty of Law, Dalhousie University. One of the Commissioners must not be a graduate in law.

Mandate

The Commission's job is to review Nova Scotia law and to make recommendations for its improvement, modernization and reform. This may involve formulating new ideas and approaches to law, or proposing ways in which existing laws and the legal system can be made clearer or simpler to better serve the needs of the province. The Commission may choose a topic for law reform based upon suggestions received from government, lawyers, judges, or the community. A project may also follow a government request, generally known as a reference. Since 1991, the Commission has received six references from the Government. The references related respectively to the administrative justice system, the probate system, mental health provisions of the Hospitals Act, adoption information law,² grandparent-grandchild access, and liability for contaminated sites arising under the Environment Act.

The Commission does not make law in Nova Scotia; that task is performed in part by the elected Members of the House of Assembly. The Commission's reports and recommendations are, however, formally presented to the Attorney General and may result in changes to the law. Law is also made through the decisions of judges and appointed administrative decision-makers in cases that come before them.

A distinguishing characteristic of the Commission is its independence from government. Although in the past the Commission received a significant portion of funding from government, on average about one third of its money came from other sources. Government has a role in Commissioner selection, but does not choose all of the Commissioners, and no Commissioner is chosen to represent the Government. The Commission does undertake government requests for law reform projects, as far as is feasible, but apart from that requirement, is free to select the work it undertakes. So long as done in compliance with its object and powers under the Act, the Commission enjoys a free hand in terms of its activities: it may conduct meetings, hire people, perform research, publish reports, enter into cooperative arrangements with other entities, and decide how its funds are to be spent.

² Reports on the administrative justice, probate, Hospitals Act, and grandparent-grandchild access projects have been completed. Following completion of background research, work on adoption information law was suspended after news in 2000 of the loss of government funding. The project was subsequently referred to a committee formed by the Minister of Community Services.

Law Reform Process

The Commission usually prepares two publications during the course of a project. The first publication, the Discussion Paper, sets out the Commission's preliminary suggestions for reform. The purpose of the Discussion Paper is to encourage people to consider and comment on the Commission's preliminary suggestions, as well as any issues, principles, and assumptions identified as having influenced the Commission's proposals for reform.

As part of the preparations for a Discussion Paper, the Commission generally forms an Advisory Group. The Advisory Group usually consists of Commission legal staff, and a number of community members, including government representatives, the judiciary, lawyers and other professionals, as well as participants from groups with interest or expertise in the topic being studied. The Group meets to identify and discuss relevant issues, as well as to propose to the Commission what should be included in a Discussion Paper.

The second publication is a Final Report, which is submitted to the Attorney General, and which is widely distributed. It contains the final recommendations of the Commission and, in some cases, a draft law. The Commission makes its final recommendations after it takes into account the responses it receives to the Discussion Paper. A Final Report is intended to provide a basis for the Government to consider and adopt the recommended reforms. The process adopted by the Commission, of seeking expert advice, consulting widely, synthesizing feedback, deliberating and report writing, is a time-consuming one. It is a process, however, which is designed to give greater weight and credibility to the final recommendations which result. The Commission does not engage in active advocacy regarding implementation of its recommendations beyond providing the recommendations to the Government and members of the public. The Commission has produced 38 project reports and 16 annual reports, which are listed at Appendix C. [All reports can be downloaded without cost from the Commission's website.]

Effects of Law Reform Work

Recommendations in Commission Final Reports have been brought into effect in a number of ways. One way, which perhaps comes most readily to mind, is through incorporation in new or amended legislation. On March 12th, 2008 a combined Health/Justice News Release announced the issuance of a draft Personal Directives Act and related discussion paper. The Government's Draft Act reflects the same issues identified by the Commission and most of the proposals recommended by the Commission in its 1995 Final Report, Reform of the Laws Dealing With Adult Guardianship and Personal Health Care Decisions. (The Government subsequently introduced and passed legislation based on the Draft Act.) In recent years, acting on proposals in respective Commission Final Reports, the Nova Scotia government has also enacted changes to provincial law dealing with testamentary wills (Wills Act, SNS 2006, c.49), mental health treatment and facilities (Involuntary Psychiatric Treatment Act, SNS 2005, c.42) and builder's liens (Builders's Lien Act, SNS 2004, c 14). The Commission also understands that the Government plans to act on recommendations in the Commission's Final Report on vexatious litigants. In 2007, the report's recommendations prompted legislators in Alberta to change the law in that province.

The influence of the Commission's work, however, goes beyond legislation. Certain Final Report recommendations have been implemented through government policies or protocols. Commission reports have also served an important educational function and have been used as course materials in high schools and at post-secondary institutions. Government, public interest groups, and other organizations have relied on Commission reports in order to develop awareness of issues and to focus discussions among interested people. For instance, Law Reform Agencies, a 2004 publication of the International Cooperation Group of the Federal Department of Justice, reflected the influence of Commission reports.

The contents of Commission reports have been referred to by a number of courts, including the Supreme Court of Canada, as part of their published case decisions. Judges have mentioned Commission reports in a number of contexts, including interim payment of damages, matrimonial property, administrative law, the jury system, powers of attorney and the legal status of the child born outside of marriage.

Nova Scotia House of Assembly members from the Liberal, New Democratic, and Progressive Conservative parties have referred with approval to Commission reports or to Commission work generally, during the course of legislative debates.

Most of the Commission's time is spent choosing, discussing, and researching law reform subjects, followed by report writing and communicating the conclusions reached. Another significant role of Commission staff is responding to inquiries about the law or about aspects of the Commission's work. The Commission does not provide legal advice, nor does it intervene in individual cases. Nonetheless, Commission staff continue to respond to inquiries by telephone, by fax, by letter, by e-mail, or in person. In replying to inquiries, Commission staff have provided legal information, copies of Commission reports as well as other documents, and contact details for government departments and other relevant institutions.

Funding

The Commission is currently funded jointly (approximately 50% each) by the Government of Nova Scotia and the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. The Law Foundation, which funds work relating to the law, legal education, and the administration of justice, obtains its funds from the interest on lawyers' general trust accounts. The Law Foundation's objectives specifically include law reform.³

B. THE YEAR IN REVIEW 2007-2008

Work Program and Publications:

► Civil Procedure Rules Revision Project

The Rules Revision Project has engaged the attention of the Commission on a priority basis since the project began in early 2004. During the past year the work on this project has largely centered as it did last year on the drafting, revision and redrafting of rules. The Commission has continued to provide legal research and the necessary related support to both the principal drafters as well as to the Steering Committee of the Rules Revision Project. By the end of the reporting period it was clear that a final draft set of rules would be printed and distributed to the judges of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeal for approval in early June. It is expected that the new rules will come into effect on January 1, 2009.

► Grandparents-Grandchildren: Access

The Commission began this project in January 2006 following a request from the Attorney General of Nova Scotia. The Commission conducted preliminary research, established a Project Advisory Group, and subsequently developed a Discussion Paper, which was distributed in January 2007.

Following the publication of the Discussion Paper the Commission received and considered submissions, conducted further research and published its Final Report with recommendations in April 2007. The Commission's Final Report and recommendations can be summarized as follows:

Family law issues, particularly as they relate to custody of, and access to, children, are especially difficult ones. This is no less so than when dealing with the issue of access by grandparents to their grandchildren. Fortunately, in most cases, child custody and access arrangements, including access by grandparents and others, are settled without recourse to litigation and the courts. The cases that do come before the courts, therefore, represent a very small percentage of the overall number of potential family law disputes.

Historically, grandparents had no automatic right of access to their grandchildren simply by virtue of their biological relationship. Legislation in all Canadian jurisdictions now makes it possible for grandparents to apply for custody of, or access to, their grandchildren. There is no jurisdiction in Canada, however, which provides to grandparents access as of right, which is usually referred to as an automatic or presumptive right of access.

It is incorrect to suggest that grandparents in Nova Scotia have no means to seek access to their grandchildren, in the event of a dispute over access with a custodial parent or guardian. Like other persons interested in a child's well-being, grandparents are entitled to seek the assistance of the courts to obtain access. What grandparents in Nova Scotia do not possess is an automatic right of access, enforceable regardless of the wishes of a custodial parent, guardian, or grandchild.

In Nova Scotia, section 18(2) of the Maintenance and Custody Act provides that a parent or guardian or "other person with leave of the court" may apply for custody of, or access to, a child.

Although there is no explicit reference to grandparents, this provision has been used by them to obtain access to their grandchildren. In Nova Scotia, an applicant must therefore first obtain the leave or permission of the court in order to bring an application. Such leave, although sometimes denied, has been granted by the Nova Scotia courts in appropriate circumstances.

Legislative provisions in all jurisdictions in Canada also mandate that courts, when deciding upon an access application, must do so on the basis of the child's "best interests." These interests are to be paramount in reaching any decision. The "best interests of the child" standard requires each case to be assessed on the basis of its own merits, as determined by careful consideration of the particular facts presented by the case.

The Commission is of the view that existing Nova Scotian legislation, when seen through the lens of the best interests of the child, currently strikes the right balance. As a result, the Commission is not in favour of creating an automatic right of access on the part of grandparents or other relatives.

Having said this, the Commission does see opportunity for reform in the area of grandparent-grandchild access.

The Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia recommends that:

- 1) In order to help guide judges, parents, grandparents and other interested persons, the Maintenance and Custody Act be amended to provide a "best interests of the child" list of factors to consider, similar to the provisions in the Children and Family Services Act.
- 2) Section 18(2) of the Maintenance and Custody Act be amended to provide that an application for access may be made by a parent or a guardian or "other person, including grandparents or other members of the child's family, with leave of the court."
- 3) The leave provision in section 18(2) of the Maintenance and Custody Act be retained.

Work in Progress

➤ Rules Revision Project

It is anticipated that the Law Reform Commission's work on the Rules Revision Project will have been largely completed within a few months of the end of the current reporting period. The Commission is pleased to have had the opportunity during the past four years to participate in, and contribute to, improving the efficacy of the Civil Justice System in Nova Scotia.

➤ Small Claims Court Project

This is a collaborative project involving social scientists from Saint Mary's University. Since the project was initiated in the Fall of 2005 the financial jurisdiction of Small Claims Court has been increased to $25,000, which for most Nova Scotians remains a significant amount of money. During the past fiscal year a questionnaire survey was developed and mailed to some 2500 Small Claims Court users. The processing of the data from that survey was recently completed and a preliminary analysis of that data was received by the Commission after the reporting period. It is anticipated that the Commission will prepare and publish a report on the Small Claims Court project during the next fiscal year.

➤ Contaminated Sites Project

The Law Reform Commission has undertaken this project as a result of a formal request from the Attorney General pursuant to s.8 (2) (b) of the Law Reform Commission Act. The Commission received the Terms of Reference for the project in February 2008. The primary focus of the project is on issues relating to the legal liability for contaminated sites arising under the provisions of the Environment Act.

Contaminated sites are often referred to as "brownfields". These sites are generally underutilized, if not idle or abandoned properties. The failure to clean up or remediate such sites can have serious economic, social and health consequences to Nova Scotians. By the end of the reporting period the Commission had completed considerable preliminary background work on this project and begun to establish a project Advisory Group. It is anticipated that the Commission will issue a Discussion Paper on Contaminated Sites during the current calendar year followed by a Final Report with recommendations in the Spring of 2009.

External Activities and Relations

The Commission and its staff consider it particularly important to maintain close liaison with the practicing bar, the judiciary, the legal academic community, the Government, our Saint Mary's University partners, and others.

In April 2007, Chief Justice Kennedy of the Nova Scotia Supreme Court presented the Law Reform Commission with the Canadian Bar Association - Nova Scotia branch "Law Day" Award. In reading the citation Chief Justice Kennedy noted among other things the Law Reform Commission's significant contribution in promoting public legal education in Nova Scotia.

Commission staff have attended and participated in a number of external meetings and conferences during the past year in addition to many less formal activities. In particular the Commission's Executive Director participated in the Annual Meetings of:

- the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society
- the Federation of Law Reform Agencies of Canada
- the Uniform Law Conference of Canada

In addition the Executive Director attended various meetings and events hosted by such organizations as the Legal Information Society of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Bar Association - Nova Scotia Branch, the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society, and the Canadian Centre for Ethics and Public Affairs.

During the past year, the Executive Director met with, amongst others, the Attorney General and Deputy Attorney General of Nova Scotia, the President and Executive Director of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society, the President of the Canadian Bar Association-Nova Scotia Branch, the Director of the British Columbia Law Institute, the Director of the Alberta Law Reform Institute, the Executive Director of the Ontario Law Commission, and the Executive Director of the Canadian Centre for Ethics and Public Affairs, and the Vice President (Academic) of Saint Mary's University.

During the reporting period Commission work was mentioned in various regional news media as well as The Lawyers Weekly, the Canadian Bar Association and Nova Scotia Barristers' Society publications, other law reform agencies' reports, and Hansard.

In June 2007, Commissioner Cromwell, the Executive Director, and the Legal Research Counsel made a presentation on the vexatious litigants project at the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia Education Seminar. The same month the Executive Director, as President of The Federation of Law Reform Agencies of Canada, hosted a Symposium in Nova Scotia with the participation of sister law reform agencies from across Canada. The Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, the Honourable Michael MacDonald, attended the opening event of this Symposium and graciously welcomed the participants. The Symposium was possible as a result of the generous financial support of the Alberta Law Reform Institute. In October 2007, the Legal Research Counsel spoke to a class of Saint Mary's University Psychology students about Small Claims and the Commission's work in general. In November 2007, the Executive Director met with the Federal Minister of Justice, the Honourable Rob Nicholson Q.C. and also attended plenary proceedings of the International Conference on Elder Law held in Vancouver B.C.

In January 2008 the Commission was very pleased to have in attendance at a meeting of Commissioners, the Attorney General of Nova Scotia the Honourable Cecil Clarke.

The Commission acknowledges the excellent co-operation and support which it has received during the past year from the Attorney General as well as the Deputy Minister of Justice, Marian Tyson Q.C.,

Internal Administration and Organization

The Commission currently has six Commissioners. In December 2007 Justice Thomas Cromwell resigned as a Commissioner, having made an outstanding contribution to the work of the Commission since his appointment in 2002. Mr. Justice Kevin Coady of The Nova Scotia Supreme Court was appointed in December 2007, following consultation with the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

John E.S. Briggs continued to serve as Executive Director and General Counsel and William Laurence as Legal Research Counsel. The Commission's Administrative Assistant was Krista Tinslay, who resigned from the Commission at the end of the fiscal year in order to pursue other career opportunities. Krista joined the Commission in April of 2006 and has provided excellent and much appreciated service to the Commission throughout her tenure.

The Commission continues to benefit from the services of Professor William H. Charles, Q.C. as Special Counsel to the Commission. Professor Charles has provided valuable assistance with respect to all of the Commission projects during the past year and in particular on the Contaminated Sites Project.

Funding & Finances

From the establishment of the Commission in 1991 until 2001, the Commission received on average two thirds of its funding from the Government of Nova Scotia, and the remaining one third from the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. At the time of its establishment, it had been purposely decided in discussions between the Government and the Law Foundation that the Commission would be funded equally by both. It was believed that with this funding arrangement the Commission would be, and would be seen to be, more independent than if it received all of its funding from Government. The original (1991) Commission budget was $300,000 (now $416,606, based on the Bank of Canada inflation calculator) of which it was expected that the Law Foundation and Government would each provide half of the required core funding.

During the fiscal years 2001 until March 31, 2004 all of the Commission funding was provided by the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. Since that time, until the present, the Commission has been funded approximately equally by the Law Foundation and the Government of Nova Scotia.

During the reporting period, the Commission received core funding in the amount of $147,425 from the Law Foundation, and $147,425 from the Department of Justice.

The Commission's financial statement for the year ending 31 March 2008 is attached to this report as Appendix B.

The Commission continued to operate during the current fiscal year within its available resources. The year began with an accumulated surplus, (including accrued project funds of $24,250) totaling $29,835. The fiscal year ended with a surplus of $10,576, which included $6700 of accrued project funding, leaving a net surplus of $3,876.

C. Law - Justice - and Democracy

“History shows that a nation which neglects the ordinary care of its laws is neglecting something which is very important to its national well-being.”⁴

This year Nova Scotians commemorate the 250th anniversary of representative government in Nova Scotia with the first elected assembly of its kind in Canada. The evolution of parliamentary democracy as we know it today in Canada thus had its beginnings in Nova Scotia in 1758. As we celebrate our history it is perhaps instructive to reflect on some of the continuing requirements for a vibrant and healthy democracy.

The rule of law is the bedrock principle of democracy. Respect for the law and its institutions is, however, essential to the maintenance of that principle. Access to the forums of justice is similarly a necessary prerequisite to maintaining the rule of law.

Reform of the law is equally, a vitally important aspect of democratic government. It is essential to the health of any justice system that it have an effective means to renew and reform itself. Law reform is thus a central thread running through and connecting respect for the law, access to justice, and the rule of law.

Experience in Nova Scotia and elsewhere suggests that law reform is best carried out as a collaborative enterprise which engages the participation of legislators, legal, judicial, and academic communities, interested groups, and members of the public. While independent law reform agencies are only one of a number of participants they have the potential to make a unique and valuable contribution to the process of law reform and are a proven, cost effective, means of complimenting the important and necessary legislative work carried out by parliamentarians. The Civil Procedure Rules Revision Project - which at the end of this reporting period was virtually complete - represents just such a collaborative law reform project. Indeed, the work of The Rules Revision Project was greatly advantaged by the enormous pro bono contributions of so many individuals. The Project also benefitted very significantly from the generous sharing of the work and experience of a sister agency - the Alberta Law Reform Institute - which had itself begun a major rules of court project in 2001.

The principal aim of this collaborative law reform effort has been to develop new civil procedure rules which are efficient, effective, clear and fair. Such rules should help to reduce delays, lessen costs, and lead to more satisfactory results, thereby improving access to justice. Major issues of concern in our civil justice system today - namely those of costs, delays and complexity - are common to all Canadian jurisdictions. Clearly the quality of our civil justice system is ultimately of potential importance to all Nova Scotians. It is because of the Law Reform Commission’s belief that the Civil Procedure Rules of

Nova Scotia are vitally important to the health of our justice system that in 2004 it agreed to participate in, and to facilitate, the work of this important public project. The Commission is pleased to have had the opportunity to contribute to this very worthwhile endeavour.

In summary the 2007 - 2008 fiscal year was a very positive one in which the Commission continued to make a significant contribution to the work of the Civil Procedure Rules Revision Project. In addition, the Commission conducted preliminary research and completed an extensive Background Paper on the Contaminated Sites Project as well as completing or advancing work on several other projects. The Commission is encouraged to believe that its support in the community has been enhanced during the past year. We begin the fiscal year 2008 - 2009 with renewed optimism and continuing enthusiasm for our work.
