A. OVERVIEW OF THE LAW REFORM COMMISSION

The Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia was created by the Government of Nova Scotia under the Law Reform Commission Act.<sup>1</sup> The Commission consists of between five and seven Commissioners (there are currently six), an Executive Director and legal research and administrative staff. The Commission reports to the public and the elected representatives of Nova Scotia through the Attorney General of Nova Scotia. It is not, however, a government department, but an independent advisor to government. The Commissioners, whose appointment process is set out in the Act, currently serve part-time and come from different sectors of the community. One Commissioner is a judge appointed by the Governor in Council (provincial Cabinet) after consultation with the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia and the chief judge of the court of which the judge is a member; two are community representatives appointed by Cabinet; two are appointed by the Council of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society; and one person represents the full-time members of the Faculty of Law, Dalhousie University. One of the Commissioners must not be a graduate in law.

Mandate

The Commission's job is to review Nova Scotia law and to make recommendations for its improvement, modernization and reform. This may involve formulating new ideas and approaches to law, or proposing ways in which existing laws and the legal system can be made clearer or simpler to better serve the needs of the province. The Commission may choose a topic for law reform based upon suggestions received from government, lawyers, judges, or the community. A project may also follow a government request, generally known as a reference. Since 1991, the Commission has received five references from the Government. The references related respectively to the administrative justice system, the probate system, mental health provisions of the Hospitals Act, adoption information law,<sup>2</sup> and grandparent-grandchild access.

The Commission does not make law in Nova Scotia; that task is performed in part by the elected Members of the House of Assembly. The Commission's reports and recommendations are, however, formally presented to the Attorney General and may result in changes to the law. Law is also made through the decisions of judges and appointed administrative decision-makers in cases that come before them.

A distinguishing characteristic of the Commission is its independence from government. Although in the past the Commission received a significant portion of funding from government, on average about one third of its money came from other sources. Government has a role in Commissioner selection, but does not choose all of the Commissioners, and no Commissioner is chosen to represent the <sup>2</sup> Reports on the administrative justice, probate, Hospitals Act, and grandparent-grandchild access projects have been completed (the last of those four reports was published in April 2007, after the end of the current reporting period). Following completion of background research, work on adoption information law was suspended after news in 2000 of the loss of government funding. The project was subsequently referred to a committee formed by the Minister of Community Services.

Government. The Commission does undertake government requests for law reform projects, as far as is feasible, but apart from that requirement, is free to select the work it undertakes. So long as done in compliance with its object and powers under the Act, the Commission enjoys a free hand in terms of its activities: it may conduct meetings, hire people, perform research, publish reports, enter into cooperative arrangements with other entities, and decide how its funds are to be spent.

Law Reform Process

The Commission usually prepares two publications during the course of a project. The first publication, the Discussion Paper, sets out the Commission's preliminary suggestions for reform. The purpose of the Discussion Paper is to encourage people to consider and comment on the Commission's preliminary suggestions, as well as any issues, principles, and assumptions identified as having influenced the Commission's proposals for reform.

As part of the preparations for a Discussion Paper, the Commission generally forms an Advisory Group. The Advisory Group usually consists of Commission legal staff, and a number of community members, including government representatives, the judiciary, lawyers and other professionals, as well as participants from groups with interest or expertise in the topic being studied. The Group meets to identify and discuss relevant issues, as well as to propose to the Commission what should be included in a Discussion Paper.

The second publication is a Final Report, which is submitted to the Attorney General, and which is widely distributed. It contains the final recommendations of the Commission and, in some cases, a draft law. The Commission makes its final recommendations after it takes into account the responses it receives to the Discussion Paper. A Final Report is intended to provide a basis for the Government to consider and adopt the recommended reforms. The process adopted by the Commission, of seeking expert advice, consulting widely, synthesizing feedback, deliberating and report writing, is a time-consuming one. It is a process, however, which is designed to give greater weight and credibility to the final recommendations which result. The Commission does not engage in active advocacy regarding implementation of its recommendations beyond providing the recommendations to the Government and members of the public. The Commission has produced 37 project reports and 15 annual reports, which are listed at Appendix C. [All reports can be downloaded without cost from the Commission's website.]

Effects of Law Reform Work

Recommendations in Commission Final Reports have been brought into effect in a number of ways. Most recently, the Nova Scotia Government introduced new legislation to reform the Wills Act (SNS 2006, c.49) thereby implementing many of the recommendations in the Commission's November, 2003 Final Report on reform of the Wills Act. In addition, the Nova Scotia Government recently introduced Involuntary Psychiatric Treatment Act (SNS 2005 c.42) thus implementing many of the recommendations in the Commission's February 2002 Final Report on the Mental Health Provisions of the Hospitals Act. In 2004, the Government also amended the Mechanics' Lien Act, based upon the recommendations in the Commission's 2003 Final Report, Builders' Liens in Nova Scotia: Reform of the Mechanics' Lien Act. The influence of the Commission's work, however, goes beyond legislation. Certain Final Report recommendations have been implemented through government policies or protocols. Commission reports have also served an important educational function and have been used as course materials in high schools and at post-secondary institutions. Government, public interest groups, and other organizations have relied on Commission reports in order to develop awareness of issues and to focus discussions among interested people. For instance, Law Reform Agencies, a 2004 publication of the International Cooperation Group of the Federal Department of Justice, reflected the influence of Commission reports.

The contents of Commission reports have been referred to by a number of courts, including the Supreme Court of Canada, as part of their published case decisions. Judges have mentioned Commission reports in a number of contexts, including interim payment of damages, matrimonial property, administrative law, the jury system, powers of attorney and the legal status of the child born outside of marriage.

Nova Scotia House of Assembly members from the Liberal, New Democratic, and Progressive Conservative parties have referred with approval to Commission reports or to Commission work generally, during the course of legislative debates.

Most of the Commission's time is spent choosing, discussing, and researching law reform subjects, followed by report writing and communicating the conclusions reached. Another significant role of Commission staff is responding to inquiries about the law or about aspects of the Commission's work. The Commission does not provide legal advice, nor does it intervene in individual cases. Nonetheless, Commission staff continue to respond to inquiries by telephone, by fax, by letter, by e-mail, or in person. In replying to inquiries, Commission staff have provided legal information, copies of Commission reports as well as other documents, and contact details for government departments and other relevant institutions.

Funding

The Commission is currently funded jointly (approximately 50% each) by the Nova Scotia Department of Justice and the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. The Law Foundation, which funds work relating to the law, legal education, and the administration of justice, obtains its funds from the interest on lawyers' general trust accounts. The Law Foundation's objectives specifically include law reform.<sup>3</sup>

B. THE YEAR IN REVIEW 2006-2007

Work Program and Publications:

► Civil Procedure Rules Revision Project

The work of the Rules Revision Project remained the Commission's principal pre-occupation throughout the past year. In the Commission's previous annual report, it was anticipated that this project would be completed in the Spring of 2007. It is now estimated that the project will not be completed before the end of the current calendar year. The bulk of the work on this project in the past year has been, and remains, drafting. This is a very labour intensive exercise, which has engaged the full time attention of a Nova Scotia Supreme Court Judge and a Senior Solicitor who is on secondment from the Department of Justice. The Commission has provided continuous research and related support to the principal Drafters and the Rules Revision Project Steering Committee.

In light of the scope and inherent difficulties of a project of this nature, it is clear that it has proceeded on both a cost beneficial and expeditious basis. The objective of this project is to produce new rules which will contribute to an amelioration of the costs, delays, and complexity, which increasingly affect all civil justice systems in Canada. The Commission is confident that this project will contribute to a reduction in the barriers to access to justice in Nova Scotia.

► Vexatious Litigants

In the beginning of this reporting period, in April 2006, the Commission issued its Final Report on Vexatious Litigants.

Vexatious litigants are people who persistently engage in legal proceedings, without having a valid claim to be heard by the courts. Vexatious litigants can waste the time of judges and administrative staff and prevent other, legitimate claims from being dealt with. They can also force other people to incur otherwise unnecessary legal bills, by having to defend themselves against meritless claims. Vexatious litigants can therefore pose a serious problem for Nova Scotia's civil justice system. It is clear that a small number of people can tie up a large amount of resources and cause a great deal of disruption by making groundless claims.

Vexatious litigants pose challenges to judicial systems across the country. Legislation or court rules meant to control vexatious litigants are in place respectively in 7 other provinces, as well as in the Supreme Court of Canada and the Federal Courts of Canada. Access to justice is a fundamental right in our society. Unfortunately, vexatious litigants can abuse that right, by repeatedly bringing to court claims which have no merit. To help ensure access to the courts for all, as well as to prevent the abuse of the courts' process and the waste of time and money, the Law Reform Commission suggests the adoption of a vexatious litigants statute in Nova Scotia.

The proposed statute would explicitly empower the courts to make an order against a vexatious litigant. The order would prevent a vexatious litigant from starting any new proceedings or continuing with an existing proceeding until court leave was granted to lift the order. A balanced approach would be used, one which empowers the courts to deal effectively with vexatious litigants, but which also permits someone subject to a court order to seek court leave to have the order lifted when circumstances change.

Among other proposals, the Commission's Final Report also recommends:

- ▶ The vexatious litigants statute should apply to all Nova Scotian courts with civil jurisdiction.
- ▶ Rather than attempting to define the term "vexatious" or to use a substitute, the vexatious litigants statute should include a non-exclusive list of factors which could help to guide the court.
- ▶ A vexatious litigants statute should require notice to be provided to the Nova Scotia Attorney General of an application for a vexatious litigants order. The Attorney General would be entitled to appear at the hearing of the application. The statute should make it clear that unless applying for a vexatious litigants order, the Attorney General's role would not be a partisan one.
- ▶ One should be able to appeal a vexatious litigants order. One should not, however, be able to appeal an unsuccessful leave application to have a vexatious litigants order lifted.
- ▶ Courts should be given an express rule-making power to determine how a leave application should take place, including any limits on the frequency of such applications.
- ▶ A vexatious litigants statute should specifically and clearly permit courts to deal with both new and continuing proceedings.
- ▶ The language used in a vexatious litigants statute should include vexatious spokespersons or agents.

► Grandparents-Grandchildren: Access

The Commission was asked to undertake a project focused on the issue of grandparent's access to grandchildren, and any recommendations for law reform. This project was referred to the Commission by the Attorney General in January 2006. Following preliminary research, a project Advisory Group was established which first met in June 2006. A Discussion Paper was subsequently developed in the fall of 2006, forwarded to the printers in December, and distributed in January 2007.

Family law issues, particularly as they relate to custody of, and access to, children, are especially difficult. This is no less so when dealing with the issue of access between grandparents and grandchildren. Fortunately, in most cases, arrangements relating to the custody and access of children, including access by grandparents and others, are settled without recourse to litigation and the courts. The cases that do come before the courts, therefore, represent a very small percentage of the overall number of family law cases.

Legislation in all Canadian jurisdictions allows grandparents to apply for custody of, or access to, their grandchildren. There is no jurisdiction in Canada, however, which provides to grandparents automatic access as of right, which is usually referred to as a "presumptive right of access."

In Nova Scotia, section 18(2) of the Maintenance and Custody Act provides that a parent or guardian or "other person with leave of the court" may apply for custody of or access to a child. Although there is no explicit reference to grandparents, this provision has been used by them to obtain access to their grandchildren. In Nova Scotia, an applicant must therefore first obtain the leave or permission of the court in order to bring an application. Such leave, although sometimes denied, has been granted by the Nova Scotia courts in appropriate circumstances.

Legislative provisions in all jurisdictions in Canada also mandate that courts, when deciding upon an access application, must do so on the basis of the child's "best interests." These interests are to be paramount in reaching any decision. The "best interests of the child" standard requires each case to be assessed on the basis of its own merits, as determined by careful consideration of the particular facts presented by the case.

The Commission is of the view that existing Nova Scotian legislation, when seen through the lens of the best interests of the child, currently strikes the right balance. As a result, the Commission is not in favour of creating an automatic right of access on the part of anyone, including grandparents.

The Commission, however, is of the view that there is an opportunity for reform in the area of grandparent-grandchildren access and sought public commentary to assist in developing recommendations for reform. In particular, the Commission invited comments on the following preliminary proposals in the Discussion Paper:

- ▶ The Maintenance and Custody Act should be amended, to provide a “best interests of the child” list of factors to be considered in deciding access cases.
- ▶ The Maintenance and Custody Act should be amended, to identify explicitly grandparents as a potential category of applicant.
- ▶ The leave provision in the Maintenance and Custody Act should be retained.

Following the publication of the Discussion Paper, the Commission received and considered submissions, conducted further research, and prepared a draft Final Report in March 2007, which was not approved for publication until after the reporting period.

Work in Progress

▶ Rules Revision Project

The Civil Procedure Rules Revision Project will continue to be the Commission’s priority project until its completion, which is now estimated to be by the end of the current fiscal year. This project has been an important and very engaging project for the Commission, and we are pleased to have had the opportunity to make a contribution to its successful progress.

▶ Small Claims Court Project

Preliminary work on this collaborative project with Saint Mary’s University began in the fall of 2005. There are several reasons why the Commission decided to undertake a project which would examine the workings of the Small Claims Court. The Court was established over 25 years ago to provide Nova Scotians with a means to have their disputes resolved quickly, cheaply, and informally without the need of a lawyer. Today, the larger civil justice system, in all Canadian jurisdictions, has become increasingly inaccessible because of exorbitant costs, delays, and complexity. The Commission was of the view that in light of the problems afflicting the civil justice system at large it would be helpful to examine how well the Small Claims Court is meeting its original objectives. Also, it was felt that the system at large might usefully learn, and possibly adopt, something from the workings of the Small Claims Court. Finally, the Commission believes that the project will generate some empirical socio-legal data and thereby contribute to a better understanding of how the justice system actually works.

During the past fiscal year, the first stage of this project was initiated and completed. This phase consisted of a series of structured interviews with Small Claims Court adjudicators, court administrators, and lawyers who appear in the Small Claims Court.

The second stage of this project will consist of a questionnaire survey of Small Claims Court users, both plaintiffs and defendants. The results of the structured interviews undertaken during the first phase of the project have helped inform the development of the questionnaire, which was very actively being developed before the end of the reporting period. As noted, this is a collaborative project with Saint Mary's University, which has generously provided financial support for research assistants, as well as ongoing faculty support and supervision.

This project has also involved discussions with, and the cooperation of, the Department of Justice, which has provided statistical data and other information. The Commission believes that this project is particularly timely in light of the recent increase in the financial jurisdiction of the Small Claims Court to $25,000.

► Contaminated Sites Project

In January 2007, the Commission initiated discussions with the Department of the Environment & Labour regarding a potential project focused on environmental issues. Through these discussions it was determined that a priority project of interest to the Department ought to focus on contaminated sites in Nova Scotia. These sites are often referred to as "brownfields" and are generally underutilized, if not idle or abandoned properties. The failure to clean up or remediate such sites can have economic, social and health consequences of considerable significance to Nova Scotians.

At the end of the reporting period, the Commission and the Department of the Environment & Labour were actively developing the Terms of Reference for a Commission project on contaminated sites. It is anticipated that the primary focus of this project will be on the issue of legal liability and a host of related issues. This is a complicated area of law and public policy which at present is characterized by considerable uncertainty in Nova Scotia and elsewhere in Canada.

External Activities and Relations

The Commission and its staff consider it particularly important to maintain close liaison with the practicing bar, the judiciary, the legal academic community, the Government, our Saint Mary's University partners, and others.

In March 2007 the Canadian Bar Association-Nova Scotia Branch announced that the CBA's Law Day Award would be given to the Law Reform Commission of Nova Scotia. The award citation noted, among other things, the Law Reform Commission's significant contribution in promoting public legal education in Nova Scotia. Historically, the Canadian Bar Association has been a very strong supporter of the establishment and maintenance of independent law reform agencies throughout Canada. The Commission was very appreciative of the recognition bestowed upon it by the Canadian Bar Association.

Commission staff have attended and participated in a number of external meetings and conferences during the past year in addition to many less formal activities. In particular the Commission's Executive Director participated in the Annual Meetings of:

- the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society
- the Federation of Law Reform Agencies of Canada
- the Uniform Law Conference of Canada

In addition the Executive Director attended various meetings and events hosted by such organizations as the Legal Information Society of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Bar Association - Nova Scotia Branch, the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society, and the Canadian Centre for Ethics in Public Affairs.

The Executive Director was an invited participant at the "Into the Future: The Agenda for Civil Justice Reform - Part I" conference in Montreal in May 2006, and the "Into the Future - Part II" conference in Toronto in December 2006. The Executive Director was also an invited speaker at the Annual Meeting of the Association of Canadian Court Administrators, and a presenter at a symposium in Toronto hosted by the Attorney General of Ontario on the newly established Law Commission of Ontario.

During the past year, the Executive Director met with, amongst others, the Attorney General and Deputy Attorney General of Nova Scotia, the Attorney General and Deputy Attorney General of Ontario, the President and Executive Director of the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society, the President of the Canadian Bar Association-Nova Scotia Branch, the Director of the British Columbia Law Institute, and the Director of the Alberta Law Reform Institute.

The Commission continues to maintain and strengthen its relations with sister law reform agencies and other participants in the justice system. During the reporting period, the Executive Director, in his capacity as President of the Federation of Law Reform Agencies of Canada, completed preliminary planning for an Atlantic Symposium scheduled to be held in Nova Scotia in June 2007 with participation from Federation member agencies across Canada. This symposium is a result of the generous financial support of the Alberta Law Reform Institute.

During the reporting period Commission work was mentioned in various regional news media as well as The Lawyers Weekly, the Canadian Bar Association and Nova Scotia Barristers' Society publications, other law reform agencies' reports, and Hansard.

The Commission's website continues to maintain an open invitation to the public for project suggestions and new ideas for law reform. As well, the Nova Scotia Courts website links to that of the Law Reform Commission for interaction concerning the Rules Revision Project.

Internal Administration and Organization

The Commission currently has six Commissioners.

In October, 2006 Mr. Keith Evans resigned as a Commissioner, having made a significant contribution to the work of the Commission since his appointment in 2002.

John E.S. Briggs continued to serve as Executive Director and General Counsel and William Laurence as Legal Research Counsel. The Commission's Administrative Assistant is Krista Tinslay, who joined the Commission in April of 2006.

The Commission was particularly fortunate this year to continue to have the benefit of the services of Professor William H. Charles, Q.C. as Special Counsel to the Commission. Professor Charles has provided especially valuable assistance with respect to all of the Commission projects during the past year.

Funding & Finances

From the establishment of the Commission in 1991 until 2001, the Commission received on average two thirds of its funding from the Government of Nova Scotia, and the remaining one third from the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. At the time of its establishment, it had been purposely decided in discussions between the Government and the Law Foundation that the Commission would be funded equally by both. It was believed that with this funding arrangement the Commission would be, and would be seen to be, more independent than if it received all of its funding from Government. The original (1991) Commission budget was $300,000 (now $406,650, based on the Bank of Canada inflation calculator) of which it was expected that the Law Foundation and Government would each provide half of the required core funding.

During the fiscal years 2001 until March 31, 2004 all of the Commission funding was provided by the Law Foundation of Nova Scotia. Since that time, until the present, the Commission has been funded approximately equally by the Law Foundation and the Government of Nova Scotia.

During the reporting period, the Commission received core funding in the amount of $140,308 from the Law Foundation, and $150,000 from the Department of Justice. In addition, the Government provided the Commission with $14,000 in supplementary funding in support of our various projects.

The Commission's financial statement for the year ending 31 March 2007 is attached to this report as Appendix B.

The Commission continued to operate during the current fiscal year within its available resources. The year began with a surplus of $5,242, which at year end after factoring in accrued project funding of $24,250, stands at $5,586.

C. THE RELEVANCE OF THE LAW REFORM COMMISSION

The Law Reform Commission is mandated to make recommendations for the improvement of Nova Scotia laws. This is a responsibility that cannot be casually undertaken. It requires careful and often extensive research, consultation with the bench, the bar, interested parties, persons with relevant expertise, and members of the public - all followed by thoughtful deliberation. These activities are necessarily time consuming. The relevance of Law Reform Commission activities are, perhaps most easily measured by tracking the Commission's success in having its recommendations enacted into law.

In this regard, the Commission is pleased to note that, for example during the past year the Government enacted reforms to the Wills Act, based upon recommendations contained in the Commission's 2003 Final Report entitled Reform of the Nova Scotia Wills Act. Further, the Government recently introduced the Involuntary Psychiatric Treatment Act (S.N.S. 2005 c.42), thus implementing many of the recommendations from the Commission's Final Report on the Mental Health Provisions of the Hospitals Act. The Commission has also been encouraged to believe that the Government will likely act upon the recommendations contained in the Commission's Final Report on Vexatious Litigants, released in April 2006. These legislative reforms and proposals for reform have relevance, in varying degrees, to a great many Nova Scotians.

Although the Commission has been particularly gratified at the number of its recommendations for reform which have, in fact, been enacted into law in recent years, it believes there are other important measures of its relevance to Nova Scotians. Public legal education, for example, has been, and continues to be an important aspect of the Commission's activities. It is for that reason that the Commission is especially grateful to have been recognized by the Canadian Bar Association-Nova Scotia Branch as the recipient of this year's Law Day Award for its significant efforts in promoting public legal education in Nova Scotia.

The Commission continues to believe that its work provides a relevant and valuable contribution to law reform efforts in Nova Scotia.

In summary, the 2006-2007 fiscal year was a positive one in which the Commission continued to make a critical contribution to the work of the Civil Procedures Rules Revision Project. In addition, the Commission completed or initiated several other projects whilst enhancing our support in the community. Notwithstanding ongoing financial uncertainty, we enter the fiscal year 2007-08 with continuing optimism and enthusiasm for our work.
